How much? I would advice not too invest what you can not lose. As an experienced trader, I know that emotion is the biggest barrier to becoming a succesful trader. Therefore, I would advice you to find a way to avoid emotional behavior. Stay rational and remember the opportunities.

7) Invest in CryptoChris, or any other strategy/cryptocurrency

I would advice you to inform yourself about cryptocurrencies and make decisions that align with your financial situation. If you aren't planning on trading or checking your cryptocurrencies too often, I would advice you to invest in crypto strategies (for example, CryptoChris). Why? Because strategy managers will use your assets and trade strategically. Money makes money.

Extra: some advice

Chances are, that you are investing now that the market is looking positive. This is what often happens, we want to see good news before we invest. We naturally tend to behave against our own favour and we tend to buy on the peak of the market (after a positive trend). The perfect example is december 2017. Many people were buying because all they could see was profit, everybody heard all the succes stories of all these people that bought into bitcoin and became rich, we started to believe that it was actually possible for us too. Most of those people who bought in december 2017 have lost their money to the ones who bought 6 months earlier.

One year ago, bitcoin was worth $3000 USD. When I asked my friends: hey guys, when bitcoin was 20k you all bought, now it's 3k and none of you guys is speaking about it? You can same product now but this time it's 6-7 times cheaper!? Most of them answered: 'nah, Bitcoin is dead.' A few months later the price was 4 times back up (13k per bitcoin). People started to message me again.

What can you take out of this?

You might invest now that my strategy is doing well, but possibly I might be doing worse for a time period. This could trigger the tendency for you to sell your positions. But actually, this might be a time where you should consider depositing more money into crypto/my strategy. The opposite is also true, imagine your money stack doubling in the first month after you deposit, you should consider selling (a part of) your positions. Be strategic and constantly consider your own financial situation and investment goals.
